Thank You For Signing Up! By Devansh Batra and Trishla Verma

<nsit.newspaper@nsitonline.in>

It is an immense pleasure to welcome another lot of enthusiastic fuchas, all shining with a glitter of hope. It is unreasonable for any senior to not envisage their first days of college during this very special time of the year. Congratulations on making it through the hardest working days of your life.

The curiosity and ambitions characterize the mental state of every fresher out there. We can promise that the college will be a unique blend of all these experiences knit together into loads of bittersweet memories, that will be simply unforgettable. Be ready for a bunch of 'Friends' and other popular TV show's references throughout your undergraduate life.

Do you feel overwhelmed about the idea of having to leave your home, adjusting with new people, no longer being on the top rung of class results, or letting go of your cute little fluffy pet and homecooked food?

But you don't need to be overwhelmed at all. While things will change fast in college, with cycles of strikingly different experiences railing up one after another, it is important to be consciously aware that they will all (un)fortunately pass away. We sincerely hope that this very curated and highly opinionated upon edition will give you satisfying, albeit generic answers to almost all your questions. Starting off, here is a set of points from your wise seniors, that should help you get started on the right path.

Explore away!

There are infinitely many interesting activities going on around the campus (and outside of it), in the various societies, classrooms, canteens and hostels. Do not miss out on the chance to be a part of any of them if you are genuinely interested. After all, it is probably the last time you will ever get a chance to be part of something you really enjoy.

Trust your guts!

As the wise old men call it, "Suno Sabki, Karo khud ki". Do not to fall blindly for others' advice. When you come across someone highly persuasive, be conscious to the fact that your life decisions are yours to make. Don't let go of your passion or undermine your goals due to seemingly harmless peer pressure. You are in much better control of what happens next, if you row your own boat.

Balance!

This point is merely an alias for an otherwise easy to overlook statement, "Please don't overlook your academics". A not-so-decent GPA will leave you void of virtually all the exciting opportunities promised by the top colleges. A not-so-decent attendance will possibly risk all your dreams. The good part is, these requirements are rather painless to fulfil. For most subjects, getting a decent GPA does not require a major investment of time or effort. However, clogging in hours a day on your study desk is also not the most recommended strategy, unless you wish to be the topper at the MIT class of 2024.

Accept Responsibility!

As you venture into adulthood and college, you will be more responsible for your actions than ever before. You will also have a lot more freedom than you ever did. Consequences and rewards similarly increase multifold. Do not be surprised at not getting an entry to the hostel, thanks to those five extra minutes you spent at the IGDTUW fest.

Stay Connected!

Colleges are made by the students they house. And we have some of the most brilliant minds, and the most friendly communities you will come across. Be sure to reach out to your colleagues, seniors, (eventual) juniors and professors whenever you want help. A close professional and personal network goes a long way.

Fall!

Yes, please do. The harder you fall, harder is the impact and harder is your resolve to not fall again.

And Get Up!

Cry out for a minute or just slap yourself for falling down (Bhaag Milkha Bhaag style). But once you are done, dust yourself off and move on.

Invest in yourself!

Find some time to meditate, go for a short jog, forgive others, forgive yourself, ask your crush out. No skill you learn at such an age will ever go waste. Go through some MOOCs, learn to cook, play the guitar, learn Latin, or finally read a book through. College is about readying yourself well enough for the rest of life.

We have a lot in store for you. The rest of this edition is much more specific to life at NSIT – the place where you will achieve the brightest of successes and the darkest of failures imaginable in the next four years.

Yours Truly,
Team Alliance

Welcome to the college that seems huge initially but gets smaller, almost exponentially as the months progress. Initially, I used to open Google Maps to navigate inside the campus. In retrospect I probably looked like a crazy tourist roaming around, bumping into people whilst my nose was buried deep into my phone. You might as well be doing a lot of bumping around initially, so it probably is a good idea for you to get acquainted with the map. Figure out all the interesting spots you want to hit and which all areas to avoid.

NSIT's guitar

Guitar dekhliya is the first question that every senior will probably ask you on the first day. Everyone will try their level best to hype it up as one of the greatest things on campus. Try not to get too worked up or you are just setting yourself up for disappointment. When you stand at the edge of administration block's terrace, you'll notice that the roadway leading to the block has been so constructed that it resembles the shape of a guitar. It's impressive but only if you didn't have any expectations.

Witch Lane

Honestly, I don't know who came up with the name but if you expect to find something actually spooky here, you'll be left sorely disappointed. The only things waiting for you back here are the pesky mosquitoes, insects and snakes, if you're really lucky.

Lovers' Lane

This place needs no explanation. All the information you need is right there in the title itself. This lane, near the sports stadium, is frequently visited by couples to whom preferred drug of choice is love.

Central Fountain

The first thing everyone notices is the exquisite piece of architecture, centrally located and aptly named, which almost immediately is followed by questions on when does it start operating. Don't pin your hopes on ever seeing the fountain work because it probably won't, even after you've graduated.

Connecting Block Terrace (CBT)

This terrace, connecting the ECE and COE block, provides haven to almost all societies. Debsoc's heated group discussions taking place at one corner and dance practices of Capella and Mirage on the other make CBT a pretty happening place.

Nescii Lawns

You'll probably be spending more time in these lawns than in any of your classrooms. Be it any free period, mass bunk or just a get together with your friends, Nescii lawns are where you'll eventually land. Just sit back and relax under the shade of trees as you contemplate your ever-so-low attendance in every lecture.

They say that you'll be spending the best four years of your life here. Honestly that's debatable and subjective, but the important thing to remember is that you are in college now. Unwind and relax a little. It's okay to let go a little, you just got here. Take in the sights, get used to breathing the polluted air and meeting new people, but don't let go to the extent that you can't catch up. Studies and fun are supposed to go hand in hand, but to be honest, the scales are always tipping towards one side and you can probably guess which one. Just don't forget why you came here; to make friends with people who make a journey through this hell bearable and once you've been through hell together, there's nothing that can break this bond!

J.U.G.A.D

By Priya Chugh and Mimansa Bagri

Surviving the day-to-day college ordeals can be quite a task and very often you find yourself embarrassingly clean-bowled. For days like these, we bring to you the revolutionary theory of J.U.G.A.D (Just Understand the Gimmicks of Adversity Dealing) using simple apps that will save your college life from turning into a catastrophic derision!

1001: Shutting up a gabby goon who blabbers incessantly

Next time you are caught up in an infinite loop of pointless words, switch on the 'Talking Tom' app and let Tom do the talking. The chirpy cat imitates the spoken syllables in an amusing way creating a chucklesome environment and at the same time, subtly signalling the person to keep calm!

1002: Retrieving your lent money from a 'Chindi' friend

Just hand over your phone to your friend and knowingly make it drop. As you reach out for it, turn on the 'Crash My screen' app and Bazinga! Take advantage of your upper hand!

1003: For your unregretful, soberly drunk nights

Ever regretted calling your ex the last time you got bhand? Ever thought that your friends would be just responsible enough to not let you text your ex? 'Drunk Mode' lets you block 'those' contacts that you could possibly drunk call/text the next time you decide to let go of your senses and will ensure that you won't have to wake up in regret that you called and proposed to your ex again. (sigh!)

1004: Evading an irksome friend who says "Bhai Party?" with every breath you take.

We all have that one friend who persistently nags us for free treats and lives off our money. Teach him a lesson by tricking him into a virtual party at an address generated by the app 'Places I've pooped' (that evidently does what it says) for a scrumptious (rather, poopalicious) treat!

1005: Chucking out the fake fawning foe from your room (life)

If you all have that annoying friend who keeps visiting your room and hogging on your cherished homemade snacks, use the 'Ghost Sensor' app that detects 'spirits' on the basis of Electromagnetic Waves and scare the daylight out of that guy. Keep repeating the Paranormal activity in your room to ensure that he won't trace his footsteps back to your room.

1006: So that you don't miss out on the 'pee'nnacle of the movie

Imagine you are in the middle of a long-awaited movie and you receive a call that you cannot decline-the nature's call! Interval seems too far and a pause button (to both) unreachable. In such a million dollar dilemma, 'PeeRun' app comes to your rescue! It tracks your movie and lets you know when can you sneak-out without missing on any major scene. A win-win deal, for sure?

1007: To steer clear of the charges of a gory murder

There are times when you are so pissed at someone that you feel like recreating WWF and smacking them right in their face. To vent out your uncontrollable rage, download the 'Punch Hit Meter' app and let off steam without worrying about any of the dire consequences!

1008: For possibly anything and everything that requires an escape

The 'Fake Excuses' app is definitely a must-have because it's totally worth it. For situations when you run out of excuses and your creativity nears a sad end, open this up and smoothly charm your way out!

This tested theory of J.U.G.A.D. shall lay the foundation of your survival for the next 4 years of college, for NSIT is a place where wildlife isn't the only thing you have to protect yourself against.

Frustrating Freshers' Scenarios

Interviewed by Shashank Vishwanath

I feel I would have to manage everything on my own. It seems impossible. How would be able to do that?

Growing up calls for better self management skills. Learning to manage oneself is a very major milestone in an individual's life. Congratulate yourself at having arrived at that stage of development. You will gradually learn the means and ways to do it. Your college faculty, your seniors and the college counsellor are always here to guide and facilitate this process for you.

This college was never my first choice, but I feel I don't have a choice.

We cannot change the cards we are dealt, just how we play the hand. So be happy with the opportunities you've been given and make the best out of them.

I have no liking for the stream I have been given/allotted or opted for.

Feel free to consult the faculty and seniors to know more about your stream, it's curriculum, applications and arrive at a logical understanding.

I don't think I can share a room with somebody in the Hostel.

Develop a comfort zone. Hostel life definitely has its challenges, but it plays an essential role in helping one grow and develop holistically.

I wonder how I will make new friends here.

Follow the basic rules of making friends and initiating friendships. Be pleasant and courteous with your classmates. Don't hesitate in greeting them. Initiate small conversations candidly. Ask and offer help, company, advice as and when required and gradually you will be able to develop friendships. Don't have too many expectations from people. Be realistic and non judgemental in your attitude.

It is difficult staying without parents.

Indeed it is. But all are part of growing up. Parents are definitely our anchors in life. But for our growth and progress children definitely have to move away from them physically. The modern ways of means and technology have definitely spanned the physical distance and facilitated easy connections which you too can enjoy and benefit from.

I am used to studying with help of coaching institutes. I don't know how I'll be able to manage here without tuitions?

Seek guidance and help from your teachers and seniors. You can benefit from the tips and suggestions that your seniors may have to offer to you. All of us have high abilities to unlearn, learn and relearn as per the needs and demands of the time. Growing up independently means carving out oneself and nurturing one's abilities and habits.

I was a star kid at my school. Will I be the same here?

That would definitely call for honest hardwork and an honest realisation that the sky is full of very many stars. Each star shines with its own brilliance. So don't be amazed if your class has many star kids like you. Experience and appreciate each other and benefit from each other's experience.

What if I am not happy here?

Please don't be in a hurry to decide this. Try and take more time to arrive at this decision. Please discuss this matter with your seniors or the college counsellor in detail so that the reasons of your discomfort can be specifically addressed to help you feel happy here.

A Guide to Surviving Outside NSIT

By Manad Gupta and Kamalpreet Singh Bhatia

Hey, you. No, not you. Yeah, you! Now that you have arrived at the hidden kingdom of NSIT, you must be in dire need of advice from someone who'll tell you the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

So, what's the most appealing aspect about college? College life, right? And college life is not just something that's strictly restricted to what you do inside the campus but it might just be the exact opposite for many of you. The Alliance's editorial team is here with a definitive guide to everything you can do outside the campus which can save the time of idly lying down on your bed and needlessly introspecting without actually coming up with a plan.

Popular Places

Explore the far-off land of Dwarka

There is definitely more to Dwarka than what meets the eye. The first thing that you'll find on your journey will certainly be The Chill Point or "Khoka", situated at just a 5-minute walk from college's north gate. It's the place to be if you're looking for an intellectual conversation or just some casual fun talk while having the famous "ban-ta". Looking for lip-smacking snacks (especially Momos) or a chilled drink, you should unquestionably offer a visit to the markets of sectors 4, 5 and 7. The sector 12 food court has become a new favourite among the students for a delightful outing to get away from a monotonous day at college. How can one talk about Dwarka and not mention sector 14? Well, the place right beside the metro station has McDonalds which attracts a plethora of crowd at any given time of the day. Want to see it for yourself? Then, start exploring today.

Broaden your Horizons

Many of you would've tried to rebrand your image in the holidays but none of you did anything for your soul, right? Well, nothing's better for your soul than some quality time spent with friends. There are many great places for your hang-out memoirs in the vicinity of Dwarka. Pacific Mall (Subhash Nagar) boasts of a great food court, a budget cinema hall for all broke hostellers and many other opportunities for having fun. And if this is not the right choice for you, then there are also many eye-catching bistros in Rajouri Garden and Punjabi Bagh for you to have some fun-filled memories with your friends.

Direct Metro connectivity from Dwarka Mor does make these options a fine choice for hostellers and day-skis alike. The eternal Connaught Place with an array of Bohemian restaurants is always there to surprise anyone who wants to live life to its fullest!

Back to the Hostel

Now, let's get back to the real monotonous world, where most of the times you'll try not to leave the comfort of your uncomfortable hostel room. Luckily, in such times you can use Zomato, Swiggy, Foodpanda and Faasos to keep your mind and hunger satisfied. Amazon, Flipkart, and torrent have made life much easier for all the bibliophiles because of their (un)timely doorstep delivery. And if you don't want to burn a hole in your pocket then there's always the hostel library and canteen for you.

Bust the Stress

By the end of the semester, most of you will be looking for something new. Well, vacations always call for the perpetually delayed Goa plans and the soul-searching trips to the barren mountains of Ladakh. Treks in Triund, Tosh, and Kheerganga are extremely prevalent among students nowadays. You'll find the serene landscapes from Kasol, Manali and Mcleodganj on everyone's Instagram and snapchat story during these days.

Try to live these best days of your life with your friends, forging numerous memories along the way that'll last with you for a lifetime. With so many choices, it'll definitely be a tough time deciding what to do!

Carry your hostel ID card at all times, misplacement of which can lead to preposterous fines and severe discomfort!

Dear Hosteller, we await to host you for confirmed booking NSIT2022 at NSIT Hostel, Azad Hind Fauj Marg, Sector-3 Dwarka.

Looking for a home away from home? A sorority that shares your disdain for engineering? A dwelling that enables you to get up at 9:55 for a 10 AM class? If yes, then you have made the indubitable choice. From gate-crashing Dwarka weddings to logistical night-outs during fests, from hurtling towards hostel to reach before curfew timings to spending the twilight hours gallivanting the alleys of Delhi. These four years will witness the forging of infrangible bonds, countless memories and anecdotes that will make your dayski friends reek of covetousness.

Mess Food

Prepare to bid adieu to the comfort of ghar ka khaana, for the same will be reduced to a dear memory during your stay here. Sometimes, you may feel fortuitous that the dal served isn't just yellow water when you hear of other hostel's food. Hold your horses right there! For the hostels here too boast of their share of inedible food often serving devilish cuisines such as lobhiya aloo and gatte ki sabzi. Wednesdays, however, are delightful when somewhat better (read: edible) food is ladled out with complimentary ice-cream. Hostels are very particular about mess timings; hence we counsel stocking up on kettle or induction cooker and a handpicked collection of instant, long lasting food items to quench those midnight cravings.

with other living creatures lurking in the hostel, be it humans or otherwise. One may encounter periodic snags in using Whatsapp and Torrents which can be easily circumvented through VPNs (writer's recommendation: www.justfreevpn.us). One can also opt for an internet connection from Excitel and Cat broadband with offers ranging from ₹300 to ₹1000 per month and an initial installation cost of ₹1200. With features such as quick installation, online recharge facility and speeds ranging from 10-100 Mbps, we guarantee negligible lag during those late night Counter Strike sessions.

Air Conditioners

Bereft of any air conditioning provisions, all boys hostels and GH-I can be a tormentous experience if you are accustomed to lazing out nights under the chilly drifts of an AC. Ergo, we advocate purchasing a cooler to make the summers physically sustainable.

GH-II is an Arcadia where triple sharing air-conditioned rooms are accessible for the female ghissus. Be credulous, for only the crem  de la crem  get accommodations here. You can spot them studying perpetually not for a good GPA, but to withhold their dwellings in this blissful hostel.

Hostel Staff

Putting shame to the bureaucratic torpidness of even government offices, the hostel caretakers are one of the most obnoxious species you'll ever confront. These faithful aides to the wardens with their inexplicable rules and orthodox mentality are oddly one of the most eminent people here. However, the rest of the staff is pretty amicable and accessible. Furthermore, we advice all hostellers to pay close attention to all rules & regulations and tips of survival from seniors to make their transition into this 'wild life' a smooth one.

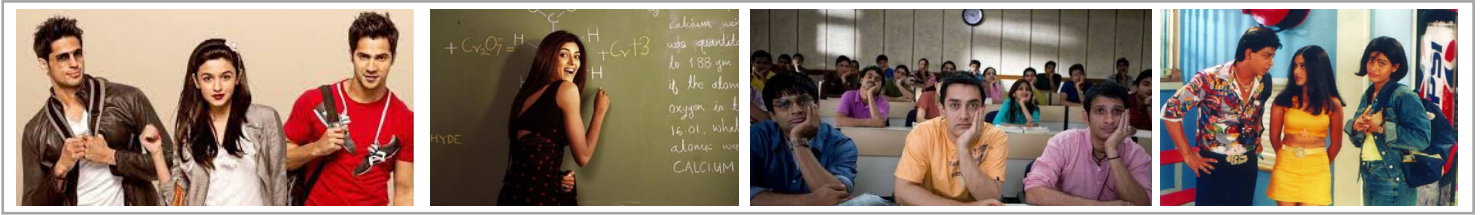

Curfew Timings

Operating under the premise that students taking admission in NSIT are recreant juveniles and it is their onus to sculpt them into gentlemen and ladies, the hostel administration runs an arduous schedule when it comes to curfew timings. For occupants of BH-4, the timings start from 7 PM that perceptibly increases to 9:30 PM. In the ensuing years, there are implicitly no limitations on hostel timings. Dolefully, for girls, it will continue to be 9:30 PM till the end of time. Female residents should note that exiting out of hostel when leaving either for returning home or a night out is mandatory. You are rewarded with a fine of ₹500 every time you forget to do so.

Living on your own in a strange place may seem to be an uphill task but at the end of these four years, you'll be taking back a suitcase full of bittersweet memories. Welcome aboard!

Wifi

Wifi facility is at one's disposal 24x7 in all hostels. With surfing speeds of 20-30 Mbps, introverts no longer need to interact

College Expectations vs Reality

By Priya Chugh and Mimansa Bagri

Boys checklist:

- 1. A perfume with a 2 Km Radar
- 2. Over the top English accent
- 3. Fakely authentic brands

Girls checklist:

- Perfectly toned abs (tummy tucker)
- One day glam face (magic parlour)
- One (borrowed) dress per day

Buffered? Now, let's go!

FIRST DAY

"Bhai mera na ek sapna hai.. jab hamara college ka pehla din hoga na..dono bhai ghode pe jayegen college.tu safed ghode pe, mai kale pe."

Your Ghoda is going to be more like an e-rickshaw and that grandiose entry that'll make people 'Stop and stare' boils down again to just a sapna. The only person who is obligated to 'stop you' and 'stare' is the watchman until you quench his eyes with your college I-card.

This is the only day when the (non-existent) magnificence of this place seems to pique your interest and everything seems rosy like a Karan Johar movie. Time slows down as the signature tunes play in the backdrop as you flick your Rapunzel-esque hair and everyone seems to go gaga over you! Day one makes you want to doll up like a diva. But with every subsequent day, the gusto to 'dress up and show up' manifests a whopping decline till you reach a point where night suits and pyjamas seem a more comfortable option to you. The transition from overdressed to underdressed to IDGAF (I don't get any fashion) happens before you even know it!

On the very first day of your college life, you meet a lot of new people, only to pass awkward smiles with and give free tutorials to aptly pronounce your quirky name.

CAMPUS AND FOOD JOINTS

Of all the things we cannot boast about, this is definitely NOT one of those. Our campus is a humongous forest turned college, exclusively featuring peacock picnics and occasional visits by our esteemed exotic guests, say a petite Monitor Lizard, for starters. Even though we could swank about our four elaborate canteens, we don't (read: we can't). Our menus massively lack diversity and cater to a common staple dish called "The Disappointment". So, if you are one of those who dedicates "All of me" to Chicken Biryani or wakes up only when it's food o'clock, then you should probably consider hibernation or start a campaign featuring

#ProjectRelocateTomUncle

But, strictly for auditive pleasure, we've got KFC! (which in our native language translates to Khan Fruit Corner). Don't judge us! And for the days when our hunger pangs turn obnoxiously obstinate, we resolve to "Tan-Tana-Tan Tan-Tan-Tara, chalti hai Kya (sector) 9 se 12?"

Not to forget are our 'classrooms', which have apparently become a hopeless search mission for the impalpable 'class' factor. Nevertheless, it wouldn't matter because you'd be chucked out from the door itself anyhow!

LOVE LIFE

"Jab Lucky ko pyar hoga na, toh saare college mein violins bajenge"

Let's accept it, neither are you Lucky, nor are you lucky. Yes, you'll fall in love (everyday with a new person), but let's face it, peppy music, coordinated back-dancers, flowery showers, perfectly timed rains - are nothing short of childhood deceptions and another of those only on-screen things. (Sigh!)

You'll find an ample amount of greenery in the campus, but not exactly the kind you were really looking for. (Special condolences to Mechanical guys for whom NSIT disguises as FSIT - Forever Single Institute of Technology)

The conscientious efforts you've put in precisely counting the number of girls in your class may outshine your dedication for JEE, but all of it succumbs to a common end result - a bummer! Beware: NSIT has a special quota for unisex name-holders!

F.R.I.E.N.D.S

Here you learn the real meaning of both "Dosti Ki Hai...Nibhani To Padegi" and "Dost, Dost Na Raha."

From being the Karan to his Arjun, risking your own attendance for his proxy, conspiring against that grouchy teacher, planning mass-bunks, accomplishing sneak-ins from the backdoor, and exhausting your ATM, you realise that friendship has more to it than what appears on the surface.

Another thing about NSIT culture is that every friend circle has people who share common names - Ghissu (The Nerd), Chindi (The broke), and Saanp (Someone who professes of failing the entire semester but ends up passing so marginally that he manages to top!)

ACADEMIA

"Life at NSIT is all about eat, sleep, chill, and repeat" said no guy ever. As much as you relish the newfound independence, you soon realise that your independence is multi-dimensionally dependent on a beast called attendance! Signboards like 'Flat 75 % off' or '75 Km to Delhi' can leave any NSITian exultantly triggered. Detention spells as 74.99. Now you know why!

The exam season brings no relief because cajoling the lab assistant, pampering the ghissu and dedicatedly devoting study leaves to farre, all prove to be fruitless. Apart from the syllabus, the one thing you need to know about is: "Nothing is constant" is a blatant lie", as quoted by the motivational speaker dubbed as 'Low Grades'.

Another thing that you will never find on the campus is an imitation of "jahanpanah tussi great ho tofa kabul karo", not because we've taken 'say no to ragging' too seriously, but because your GPA would eventually make you take your pants off!

The college makes sure that you experience fests, just not as many as you'd expected and not exactly as you'd dreamt it. Your mega-sensational all-night party terminates with a wee letter 'w' (curfew!)

The sheer sense of euphoric happiness that an unexpected happening brings to you is boundlessly larger than the contentment of a fulfilled expectation. And these are definitely the moments we live for!

For all of us, in our mini cinematic world, somewhere between anticipations of climax and despondence of anticlimax, a blissful thing called college charismatically happens. Be it the adorable pair of 'Rahul-Anjali', the attention-seeking 'Shanaya', the dweeby crybaby 'Chatur' or the super cranky VIRUS, every batch has their share of tales, bloopers, re-takes, remakes and the much-awaited 'To be continued'!
